FOR RELEASE SUNDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1962
Robert D. Woodward, FE 8-4995

A two-year series of open lectures on the current progress in mathematical research begins at George Washington University's Lisner Auditorium on Thursday, October 11, when Professor Paul Halmos of the University of Michigan takes "A Glimpse Into Hilbert Space".

Arranged by the university's department of mathematics and sponsored by the Office of Naval Research, the lecture series will survey research progress throughout modern mathematics in modern terms. Each presentation will consist of two lectures on the same day--one lecture at 10:30 a.m. and the other at 2 p.m. Fifteen monthly lectures have been scheduled over the next two academic years.

Some of the world's leading mathematical scholars will participate in the lecture series, Professor David Nelson, head of the university department of mathematics, said. Professor Richard Brauer of Harvard University will be here on November 15 to discuss algebraic group theory, and on December 7, Professor Irving Kaplansky of the University of Chicago will talk on Lie algebras.

Others who have accepted invitations to participate in the series are Professor Laurent Schwartz, University of Paris; Professor Samuel Eilenberg, Columbia University; Dr. Alston Scott Householder, senior mathematician at Oak Ridge National Laboratory since 1946; Professor K. O. Friedrichs, Institute of Applied Mathematics, New York University, and Professor Lars Ahlfors, Harvard University.

The purpose of the series is to provide a more rapid and efficient dissemination of information on the current status and principal directions of research in mathematics. The lectures will be published under the editorship of Dr. Thomas Saaty of the Office of Naval Research. Scientists on the staff of Navy laboratories and other naval activities in the Washington area will attend the sessions, but Dr. Nelson stressed that the lectures will be open to the public.

R. Steven Pinkstaff, who will receive his Juris Doctor degree in law at George Washington University in February, has been awarded the Patent Office Society Student Award presented by the university's Patent, Trademark and Copyright Foundation. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. M.L. Pinkstaff of 26 Birchwood Lane, Hartsdale, New York.

The Patent Office Society provided financial assistance for the establishment of the award, which is presented annually to the author of the best paper submitted by a student in the Foundation's seminar and lecture series. The recipient is presented with a citation and an honorarium, and his paper is published in the Foundation's Patent, Trademark and Copyright Journal of Research and Education.

Mr. Pinkstaff's prize-winning paper dealt with the copyright notice requirements for works of foreign authors published abroad. Pinkstaff concludes that "although there is case law indicating that a publication abroad will not bar a U.S. copyright, the implementing legislation for the Universal Copyright Convention indicates a congressional intent to require a copyright notice on all works whether published in the United States or abroad."

Pinkstaff suggests that "the proposed copyright statute now being considered by Congress should contain an express statement regarding the rights of foreign authors."

Pinkstaff, who attended the university's law school in the evening from 1959 to 1962, joined the patent law firm of Soans, Anderson, Luedeka and Fitch in Chicago upon completion of law school. He received a B.S. in chemical engineering from Iowa State University in 1959. While attending the university law school, he was associated with the patent law firm of Kemon, Palmer, Stewart and Estabrook. He was a member of the university Law Review during his senior year, and was the author of a case note appearing in the publication.

PETER, PAUL, and MARY, the well known folk singing trio, will appear in a concert at the George Washington University on Saturday, November 10, 1962, at 8:30 PM in the university's Lisner Auditorium, 21st and H Streets, NW. The concert is being sponsored by the George Washington University Student Council.

"The Lemon Tree", "Five Hundred Miles", and "The Hammer Song" are three selections for which they have become known in their appearances all over America. They have appeared at the Blue Angel in New York, the hungry i in San Francisco, and the Lamb's Club in Miami, as well as on such television programs as the "Today Show" and "P.M. East".

The Warner Brcs. record "Peter, Paul, and Mary" includes two of Paul's own compositions, "Rain, Rain", called by New York Times critic Robert Shelton,... "a touching evocation of a child's world", and "Early in the Morning".

Life-long interests in folk music led all three to Greenwich Village where Al Grossman, manager of Odetta, put them together as a trio. They spent seven months working up their initial repertoire of 18 numbers, and polishing their arrangements with the help of Milton Okun (formerly with Harry Belafonte).

Peter Yarrow is a Cornell graduate and a native New Yorker. Mary Allin Travers was born in Louisville, Kentucky, and Paul Stookey grew up in Birmingham, Michigan. They are all in their early twenties, single, and good looking.

"Folk music is the simple yet profound way people tell about their lives", Paul says, "I believe we are able, sometimes, to say what they want said".

TICKETS for the concert will be on sale at The Disc Shop, 1825 Connecticut Avenue, NW, the Student Union of the George Washington University, American University, Howard University, Georgetown University, and the University of Maryland. The price is $2.25 for all seats.

"The Magic Horse", a full-length Russian animated color cartoon, will highlight the first meeting of the George Washington University Russian Language Club on Wednesday, October 17, at 8:00 PM in Woodhull House (2033 G Street NW) on the university campus.

"The Magic Horse", is the first full-length Russian color cartoon feature. Magnificent sets and authentic background material provide a bright decor for this favorite old Russian folk tale of a little boy and his tiny humpbacked horse with magic powers. More than two years were spent in the preparation of this film. Dialogue is in English. A review of the film in The New York Times stated, "Thoroughly charming...imaginative and cheerful entertainment...its visual attributes are universal and can be appreciated by all".

"Russian Ballet and Folk Dances" features the great ballerina Galina Ulanova in "Swan Lake" and a Ukranian song and dance ensemble.

Introducing these two films, Mr. Leo Teholiz will give a short talk on Russian folk art. Mr. Teholiz is a commercial artist and audio-visual educational specialist for the United States government. One of his major fields of interest is early and medieval Russian folk art and culture.

The meeting is open to anyone interested in attending. Admission is 50¢. Members of the Russian Language Club will not be charged admission.

Russian Language Club officers for the year are: President, Sharon Ringel; Vice President, Thomas Peppler; Secretary, Diana Jones; Treasurer, Henry Bosma.

FOR RELEASE ON SUNDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1962

Robert D. Woodward, FE 8-4995

Dr. John Anthony Brown, Jr., Vice President of Occidental College in Los Angeles, has been elected Vice President for development at The George Washington University by unanimous vote of the Board of Trustees, President Thomas H. Carroll announced yesterday. Dr. Brown will assume his new duties on February 1, 1963.

Dr. Brown will direct the university's development efforts which include institutional relations, alumni relations and public relations activities. C. Max Farrington, who has supervised the development program, has been named Assistant to the President for special projects.

Dr. Brown has had a long and distinguished career as a student, teacher and administrator. He is the author of a number of articles in his chosen field, international law and politics, and in institutional development. He was Assistant to the President for development at Temple University from 1955 to 1960 before assuming his duties as Vice President for public affairs and finance at Occidental College.

While at Temple University, Brown taught international law and politics and served as a part-time lecturer in the Woodrow Wilson School, Princeton University. He also served as Dean of Men at Temple from 1952 to 1955.

Dr. Brown received his A. B. degree in history and political science from Temple University in 1943. He was president of the student government, the debate society and the history honor society.

While he was pursuing graduate work in international law and politics at the University of Chicago, he held a full-time job with Time magazine's editorial production department and was president of the graduate student association. He received an M. A. degree from Chicago in 1945.

Dr. Brown pursued further graduate studies at Princeton University on a DuBois Fellowship during 1947-48. In 1951-52 he was granted a Ford Foundation Fund for the Advancement of Education Fellowship to pursue research at Princeton.

He is creator of the award-winning program, "Governments of Man," heard on CBS radio on the east and west coasts, as well as over the Armed Forces radio network. In the weekly 25-minute broadcast, Brown discusses human ideas and experiences in government. His subjects have ranged from Thomas Jefferson to Red China, from Ancient Rome to Cuba.

Dr. Brown received an LL.D. degree from Westminster College and an L.H.D. degree from Ursinus College in June 1962.

He is chairman of the International Section of Town Hall in Los Angeles, and is a member of the American Political Science Association, American College Public Relations Association, American Alumni Council, American Management Institute, University Club of Los Angeles, Princeton Club of Philadelphia and the Los Angeles Committee on Foreign Relations.

While in Philadelphia he served as president of the board of directors of the International Institute of Philadelphia, vice president of the Citizens' Committee on Immigration and Naturalization, and vice president of the American Council for Nationalities Service. He has continued his work for the ACNS and currently serves on the council's national board.

A three-year study of law governing mental incompetency is being undertaken at George Washington University's National Law Center with the aid of a $95,361 research grant from the National Institute of Mental Health, university President Thomas H. Carroll announced yesterday.

Director of the new project is Dr. Henry Weihsen, professor of law on leave from the University of New Mexico, and a well-known authority in the field of the relations of law and psychiatry.

The study will investigate the law and how it actually works in selected communities throughout the nation.

Dr. Weihsen said the study will look into the problems of persons who become too ill mentally to manage their daily affairs. It will seek the answers to such questions as: Is a person who is or has been in a mental hospital necessarily incompetent to transact business, sell real estate, or drive an automobile? Can he make a valid will? Is he entitled to vote? Under what circumstances may a license to practice a profession such as law or medicine be revoked because of mental illness?

"Hopefully, the study will provide data that can be used in drafting a model statute that states interested in improving their law could adopt," Dr. Weihsen said.

Dr. Weihsen, who holds his J. D. and J. S. D. degrees from the University of Chicago, received the Isaac Ray Award from the American Psychiatric Association in 1955 "for outstanding contributions to the relations of law and psychiatry."

Offices for the mental competency study have been established in Room 820 of the Federal Bar Building. Dr. Weihsen lives at 2401 H Street, N. W.

Henry W. Herzog, Treasurer of The George Washington University, has been elected as Vice President and Treasurer of the university by the Board of Trustees, President Thomas H. Carroll announced today.

"Mr. Herzog's appointment as a university Vice President recognizes his long, dedicated and highly effective service to The George Washington University," President Carroll said.

Herzog joined the university staff in 1931 as graduate manager of publications, then served as Assistant to the Comptroller, and later as Assistant Comptroller. In 1940 he was appointed as Comptroller of the university. In 1953 he was named Treasurer.

A native Washingtonian, Herzog graduated from The George Washington University in 1930 with a B. S. degree in civil engineering. He attended McKinley High School.

He has held positions of responsibility in many civic and professional organizations, and presently is president of the Washington Society for the Blind. He is a member of the board of trustees of Group Hospitalization, Inc., and represents hospitals participating in the plan. He is a director of the Northwestern Federal Savings and Loan Association and a trustee of Mount Vernon Seminary.

Herzog is past president of the Washington Rotary Club, the Eastern Association of College and University Business Officers, and the D.C. Chapter of the Financial Executives Institute. He is a member of the Washington Board of Trade, Temple Noyes Lodge, the Metropolitan Club, Columbia Country Club, and the Westmoreland Congregational Church.

A study of the historical development of the British Commonwealth market and its industrial property systems should provide valuable information on contemplated international or supranational patent systems, says L. James Harris, executive director of George Washington University's Patent, Trademark and Copyright Foundation.

Moreover, Britain and the Commonwealth may be missing an opportunity, may be discarding their experience, and in effect, be rejecting their own historical continuity if they fail to consider the full range of alternative approaches that they could take in their negotiations with the European Economic Community, Harris writes in the latest issue of the Foundation's Journal of Research and Education.

"It is clear that, despite the limited public attention, the British Commonwealth of Nations has constituted a highly developed common market and will remain one unless Great Britain cuts the ties of association completely on joining the European Common Market," Harris said.

"The trumpets have not sounded for the Commonwealth market because it has been with us so long, it is generally taken for granted," he said.

Harris hopes that his paper will encourage further study of the contributions of the Commonwealth market to international industrial property and economic experience so that they might be better understood and utilized for future world market decision making.

Harris suggests that the view of history presented in his paper "indicates more alternatives or opportunities, which may not seem naturally to emerge, that Britain and the Commonwealth could well consider." He thinks an alternative approach could be taken with respect to the European Economic Community on the basis of reciprocity-- "one large trading bloc cooperating with another on the basis of full parity."

STUDENT COUNCIL

October 25, 1962

The President
The White House
Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. President:

Recognizing the seriousness of this hour of tension, we, the Student Council of The George Washington University, unanimously state our complete support for and agreement with your statements made during the broadcast to the American people on Monday night and the issuance of the Proclamation of Quarantine. The future of this nation's way of life and the liberal democratic tradition of the Western World depends on your leadership and the firmness of the American people in the face of the Sino-Soviet threat. The students of this University, named for our first war-leader and President, are firm in their resolve to uphold the tradition he helped create.

We, therefore, as students, citizens, and future leaders, pledge ourselves to the firm support of your position in a determined and fearless stand against the aggressive threat of those who wish to destroy this nation and its way of life.

Yours truly,

Donald B. Ardell, President
The Student Council
The George Washington University

WHAT: Homecoming Queen Finalists
at George Washington University

WHERE: 1824 19th Street, NW

WHEN: 5:30 PM, Friday, October 26
TODAY, THAT IS

Five finalists will be selected by a panel of judges during the traditional Queen's Tea, to be held from 3 to 5 PM. The tea is always held at the Sigma Alpha Epsilon House, 1824 19th Street NW, because it is off campus and because the Sigma Alpha Epsilons never nominate a Homecoming Queen candidate. The five finalists are voted on by the entire student body and the queen is crowned by the student council president at the first big homecoming event, in this case at the musical "Bye, Bye, Birdie".

Jane Lingo of the Public Relations Staff will be present to assist photographers.

A $16,500 research grant has been awarded to George Washington University's Center for Behavioral Sciences by the National Council of Juvenile Court Judges to support evaluation of the council's experimental continuing education program for juvenile court judges.

Aided by a grant from the National Institute of Mental Health, the council has developed a series of regional training institutes and state work conferences to better equip juvenile court judges to cope with difficult and specialized problems confronting their courts.

The grant to George Washington University will be used to evaluate the council's educational program.

Dr. Gordon L. Lippitt, director of the university's Center for Behavioral Sciences, said the research advisory committee consists of Thomas Bennett, director of graduate studies, George Williams College; Edward Greenwood, coordinator of training in child psychiatry, The Menninger Foundation; Quintin Johnstone, professor of law, Yale University; James Mosel, associate professor of psychology, George Washington University; Charles Shireman, professor of social work, University of Chicago; E. Paul Torrance, director of the bureau of education research, University of Minnesota, and Ralph K. White, chief of the special projects division, U.S. Information Agency.

Project staff members are Lippitt, Charles Seashore, program director of the National Training Laboratories, National Education Association, and Daniel Skoler, executive director of the National Council of Juvenile Court Judges.

The project research director is Mrs. Shirley McCune.

George Washington University's local engineering honor society, Sigma Epsilon, has been granted a chapter charter by the 57th convention of Tau Beta Pi, a national engineering honor society, Martin A. Mason, Dean of the School of Engineering and Applied Science, said.

A formal installation will be held later in the academic year, and the GWU chapter will be known as District of Columbia Gamma chapter, Mason said.

"The recognition is specially significant," he said, because "our School becomes only the eleventh school in the nation to have been granted chapters by both of the nation's recognized engineering honorary societies." Xi Chapter of Sigma Tau, an honorary engineering fraternity, was established at the university in 1921.

Adviser of the Sigma Epsilon group is Professor R. R. Fox. He said there are presently about 20 student members in the group.
